Washington D.C, May 17, 2010 – The Adisadel Old Boys' Association (North America) announces the launch of a new book about Adisadel College, one of the oldest institutions for boys in Ghana, West Africa. The title of the book is Adisadel On The Hill – The Story. It was written by Rev. Professor John S. Pobee, a past student of Adisadel College, in commemoration of the school's one hundredth anniversary. The book launch will take place at 9405 Myrtle Ave, Bowie, MD 20720 on Saturday, May 29th, 2010 from 3pm to 7pm.

In his review, Mr. Kojo Yankah (President of the African University College of Communications) wrote that the book helped in 'understanding much better who you are, and what Adisadel College contributed to your formation. He challenges you to an exercise in soul-searching and self-identification.'

Adisadel On The Hill – The Story by Professor Pobee is a must-have for every true Santaclausian and any other person interested in the history of the Ghanaian school system. It delves into the psyche and purpose of the school, from instinctive and intellectual perspectives, endowing the book with a refreshing balance.

This book launch will serve as an event to raise funds to assist Adisadel College in its fundraising drive. Help us raise funds by purchasing copies of this book in advance or during the event.
